“ A poem for family and friends of Larry.

“Comfort to Those I Love”

*Shed your tears as I know you must,
But know that in God I trust.
My earthly body may lie before you,
Yet in spirit I find His promise true.
No longer do I feel earthly pain or sorrow,
For now I rejoice in seeing tomorrow.
It is filled with those I love who have gone before,
And with the assurance of being with you all forever more.
Remember when I admired the eagle that flew so high?
Now it is I who flies beyond the cloudy sky.
Here I will watch over all of you day after day,
And I will always love you as if I never went away.
Though you will not be able to hear or see me,
In your hearts and in spirit I will always be.
Find comfort in the following things I say to do:
Look to the sun in the day and know it is I smiling down on you;
Feel the freshness of the rain as I wash your worries of the world away;
The morning singing of the birds will announce my presence
throughout the day;
You shall feel my breath and kisses in the gentle breeze that passes through;
Heaven's stars will be my eyes all through the night watching over you;
Hold fast to our faith in God as we have known,
For these truths I am now being gratefully shown.
To all my loved ones, please do not fret for me,
For by your love and in His, I am truly happy!*
