“ Rod and I were born three days apart and we would always joke that as my mom & I were leaving the hospital, Aunt Margaret was coming in to have him and that I told him "C'mon out, it's a piece of cake". When we were around 10 he was fascinated with The Addams Family and would draw the characters all the time, especially Morticia. He did some beautiful drawings. I wish he would have done something with his artistic talents but he liked keeping it to himself. We used to joke around and laugh a lot and sometimes all we had to do was look at each other and just crack-up and would drive Aunt Margaret crazy. I cherish those old memories, and that is how I will always remember him. I know Rod is finally at peace.

“ When his nephew Mark was a year and half . Rodney was asked by his sister to watch his nephew Mark while she was doing something . When his sister came in she could hear her son but could not find him. She ask Rodney who was again drawing at his desk and was ask where his nephew was? She noticed a noise coming from the bathroom Rodney came out of his room and told her he had set mark in the clothes hamper. The lid was up and was told he put him there because he would not stay still mark keep crawling away . He felt the best solution was to keep him still he put him in a hamper . When sister look in the hamper her son look up at her and started grinning so guess everything turned ok .
